- Marriage is a union of two whole individuals, not halves seeking completion.
- Singleness is about being separate, unique, and whole.
- Love alone does not ensure a successful marriage.
- Marriage is about fulfilling God's purpose, not just personal feelings.
- Developing your singleness is crucial before marriage.

INTRODUCTION

Marriage and singleness are significant aspects of life that the Bible addresses with profound wisdom. Understanding these states through a biblical lens helps individuals prepare for marriage and appreciate singleness. This study explores the importance of being whole before marriage, the misconceptions about love, and the divine purpose of marriage.

SCRIPTURE READING

- Matthew 19 — Jesus addresses the comprehensive aspects of singleness, marriage, and divorce.
- Malachi 2 — God speaks against the destruction of marriages and emphasizes faithfulness.

KEY POINTS

1. WHOLE INDIVIDUALS IN MARRIAGE — Marriage should be a union of two whole individuals, not a 50-50 arrangement. Each person must be complete and unique before joining in marriage. This completeness allows for a healthier relationship where both partners contribute fully. The biblical view encourages individuals to find their identity and purpose in God before seeking a partner.

- Reflect on your personal growth and areas where you need to become more whole.
- Seek God's guidance in understanding your identity and purpose.
- Engage in activities that foster personal development and spiritual maturity.

Scripture: Matthew 19

2. UNDERSTANDING SINGLENESS — Singleness is about being separate, unique, and whole. It's a time to develop one's character and deepen one's relationship with God. The Bible views singleness not as a deficiency but as an opportunity for growth and service. Embracing singleness can lead to a more fulfilling life, whether or not marriage is in the future.

- Embrace your singleness as a time for personal and spiritual growth.
- Identify ways you can serve others and contribute to your community.
- Cultivate a deeper relationship with God through prayer and study.

3. MISCONCEPTIONS ABOUT LOVE — While love is important, it alone does not guarantee a successful marriage. Other factors, such as personal wholeness, communication, and shared values, play vital roles. The Bible teaches that love should be accompanied by commitment, understanding, and mutual respect.

- Evaluate your understanding of love and its role in relationships.
- Develop skills in communication and conflict resolution.
- Ensure that your values align with those of your potential partner.

4. GOD'S PURPOSE IN MARRIAGE — Marriage is about fulfilling God's future plans and producing godly offspring, rather than just personal satisfaction. The Bible emphasizes that marriage should reflect God's love and faithfulness. Couples are called to support each other's spiritual growth and work together to fulfill God's purposes.

- Discuss with your partner how you can fulfill God's purpose together.
- Pray for guidance in aligning your marriage with God's plans.
- Focus on building a relationship that reflects God's love and faithfulness.

Scripture: Malachi 2
