COMPATIBILITY IN MARRIAGE: BEYOND LOVE

AT A GLANCE

BIG IDEA

While love is often seen as the cornerstone of marriage, it is not enough on its own. True compatibility, especially in spiritual and life goals, is essential for a lasting relationship. This study explores the importance of agreement and selflessness in marriage, urging couples to look beyond fleeting feelings.

PRIMARY PASSAGES

Amos 3:3

2 Corinthians 6:14

KEY TAKEAWAYS

- Love is often misunderstood as just a feeling.
- Compatibility is more important than feelings in marriage.
- Feelings are transient and should not dictate relationship decisions.
- Marriage requires selflessness and serving your partner.
- Spiritual and life goal compatibility is crucial for a successful marriage.

INTRODUCTION

Marriage is often viewed through the lens of love, but love alone is not sufficient to sustain a lifelong partnership. This study delves into the necessity of compatibility in marriage, emphasizing the importance of shared values, beliefs, and goals. By understanding the transient nature of feelings and the need for selflessness, couples can build a strong and enduring relationship.

SCRIPTURE READING

- Amos 3:3 — Emphasizes the necessity of agreement and compatibility in relationships.
- 2 Corinthians 6:14 — Highlights the importance of spiritual compatibility in marriage.

KEY POINTS

1. MISUNDERSTANDING LOVE — Love is often misunderstood as merely a feeling, leading to misguided decisions in relationships. True love involves commitment and understanding beyond emotions. Many enter marriage with the belief that love will conquer all, but without a deeper understanding, this can lead to disappointment. Love should be seen as a choice and a commitment to support and understand one's partner.

- Reflect on your understanding of love and how it influences your relationship.
- Discuss with your partner what love means to both of you.
- Commit to viewing love as a choice and not just a feeling.

2. THE ROLE OF COMPATIBILITY — Compatibility in values, beliefs, and life goals is more crucial than feelings for a successful marriage. Couples should prioritize these aspects when choosing a partner. Without compatibility, couples may find themselves in constant conflict, unable to agree on fundamental life decisions. Spiritual and life goal alignment fosters unity and shared purpose.

- Evaluate the compatibility of your values and beliefs with your partner.
- Discuss your life goals with your partner to ensure alignment.
- Seek spiritual guidance together to strengthen your shared beliefs.

Scripture: Amos 3:3 2 Corinthians 6:14

3. THE FLUCTUATION OF FEELINGS — Feelings are not stable and can change over time. Decisions in relationships should not be based solely on emotions. Relying on feelings can lead to instability, as emotions can be influenced by external circumstances and personal changes. A strong marriage is built on more than just emotional highs.

- Recognize the transient nature of feelings in your relationship.
- Focus on building a foundation of trust and commitment.
- Communicate openly with your partner about changes in feelings.

4. SELFLESSNESS IN MARRIAGE — Marriage requires serving and prioritizing your partner's needs. This selflessness is key to a fulfilling and enduring relationship. By putting the needs of your partner first, you create a supportive and loving environment. Selflessness fosters mutual respect and deepens the bond between partners.

- Identify ways to serve your partner daily.
- Practice active listening to understand your partner's needs.
- Commit to prioritizing your partner's well-being.
